Danny Z You can purchase Photoshop as a standalone program for $699. But if you're serious about learning the program, we recommend starting with an Adobe Photoshop Master Class, which is a series of classes that cover the entire program. The Master Class sessions take approximately two hours each and cost around $200. Alternatively, you can purchase the full Adobe Photoshop CS6 program and learn all you need to know over the course of a two-week Master Class. Finally, you can also purchase a set of Photoshop Blender brushes and learn the program from tutorials and instructional videos on the free Adobe Story website. If you would prefer a bit of do-it-yourself, you may even be able to download the software and learn Photoshop at your own pace using the help you can find on the Web. Photoshop Basics Photoshop is an image-editing software program that operates on a layer-based system. In layman's terms, layers represent the various areas in the image that can be modified using Photoshop's tools. For instance, you might have a set of shapes (or layers) to create a logo, a set of lines to create a frame for your photo, and layers containing an illustration of a leotard for a cheerleader. You can easily manipulate and combine these layers to create an edited photo. You can also rearrange layers, modify the settings of the layers, and perform a variety of image editing tasks using Photoshop. Installing If you buy Photoshop from the website or from an on-site kiosk, you don't need to install the program onto your computer. However, if you're purchasing a CD, you'll need to download it to your hard drive. Running Photoshop Once you've downloaded the program, you'll be able to access it and start making changes to your photos. You'll need to install some updates to Photoshop first. Before you can do anything, you'll need to download the latest version of the program from the Adobe website, then install it. The downloadable file contains two things. The main folder is the installation program, which is the program

The problem is I don't know how to do it. The website shows the code as follow and it also is described here. if (x == 2) { UIAlertView *alert = [[UIAlertView alloc] initWithTitle:@"Success!" message:@"You are the winner of level 2!" delegate:self cancelButtonTitle:@"OK" otherButtonTitles:nil, nil]; [alert show]; [alert release]; } I really don't understand how it is working. I think that the code above is not enough to display the alert box. Can anyone help me with this problem? A: You have to define a delegate (which your class will implement) and then add the alert view to it. @interface MyClass : NSObject @end @implementation MyClass - (void)alertView:(UIAlertView *)alertView clickedButtonAtIndex:(NSInteger)buttonIndex { // do something } @end Then to add an alert view to your interface, you do something like: UIAlertView *alert = [[UIAlertView alloc] initWithTitle:@"Success!" message:@"You are the winner of level 2!" delegate:self cancelButtonTitle:@"OK" otherButtonTitles:nil, nil];

What's New In?

Q: Reverse order of an array Say I have a variable in a 2D array `int[,] array = { {1,2,3}, {4,5,6}, {7,8,9} }`; and I want to do a loop that loops through all of the values, starting from the last element and going through the first. So the end result would be `{9,8,7}` and the process would be `1,2,3 4,5,6 7,8,9` I have been trying to use for loops and searching on the internet for recursion but I can't seem to find a working solution. It would be nice to have a more elegant solution than a single linq query. A: I thought this was a fun challenge! Here's my approach, using LINQ. First, I'm going to store each value in a List so that we can sort it if needed. But, because the original values are already ordered, I don't need to re-order the list. Then, using the original ordering, we can just pick off the first value in each group. `var result = array.GroupBy(x => x).Select(x => x.First()).ToArray();` A: As an answer to the problem, here is a solution in one-liner using LINQ : `var result = array.Zip(array[1,2,3].Skip(1), (x, y) => x).ToArray();` Advertising Read more New York (AFP) Adidas was accused Friday of secretly collecting information on consumer purchases at Apple's online store, a charge the German sportswear company swiftly rejected.
