Meijer Photography Westfield Miguel and I went to Westfield with our daughter and her friend to take pictures of their art show this weekend. I had some laundry to do and had the trunk of my car packed with towels, clothes, and the like. I was surprised to find that every single one of the shopping carts had a grocery bag in the back. Great! We usually get them when we do our deliveries, but not so at Westfield. I love the fact that there are no carts to push or carry when shopping at Westfield, but they had them in the parking lot. We walked around and saw all sorts of wonderful products with interesting prices. We were able to find four different products. We were taken by an older gentleman who had an incredible collection of hand-blown glass, he had a huge white table he made himself and it was amazing. It was very shady and I wasn't the biggest fan, but I know that Miguel was. I think it was cooler too. I was considering the soap when we got a call from our daughter's aunt. She was calling to ask about the gift cards she was purchasing, they were $20 each and they told us not to tell anybody she had bought them. Great! We look for $20 gift cards at the store all the time. We ended up getting more than we expected. I think we spent about $50 total. The first one had a knife, but I think the guy who had it figured out that it was a kitchen knife and offered to sell it to me, and I was happy to buy it. I might have bought three of them. I love to buy jewelry, especially if it's something that I know I'll use. These were awesome. I love the cuts and curves on them. I may buy these for some jewelry I'm making. I have a lot of gold saved up, and of course I have some gold from my Mom. I also found some gift cards that are all gold, and my daughter and her friend were thrilled to have their pictures taken with the gold. We had some fun with this one. We could have probably spent a whole hour playing in the sand with all the different parts. How could you not? This is what I think of when I hear Steven Vonnegut's "Heaven Is a Place on Earth" I

A method for noninvasive visualization of indwelling left internal mammary arteries for coronary artery bypass grafting. The objective was to evaluate a noninvasive method for visualizing the correct placement of left internal mammary arteries during coronary artery bypass grafting. The clinical noninvasive method involves palpation of the inferior-posterior surface of the left breast to assess the correct location of the left internal mammary artery during coronary artery bypass grafting. Potential pitfalls exist, however, in the clinical assessment of left internal mammary arteries by palpation of the breast. This technical note describes a cadaveric study examining the feasibility of using invasive femoral angiography to establish the correct position of the left internal mammary artery in cadaveric specimens. An anatomic study was performed using 12 cadavers. The left internal mammary artery was visualized in 10 of 12 cadavers (83%). In the clinical setting, palpation of the left breast for the correct position of the left internal mammary artery is likely inappropriate, and other, less efficient means must be employed to visualize the left internal mammary artery. In this study, we demonstrated the feasibility of using an invasive approach to establish the correct position of the left internal mammary artery for coronary bypass grafting by simultaneously visualizing the left internal mammary artery by externalization of the artery and external visualization by intraluminal radiopaque contrast injection. The future of clopidogrel: from the UK to the US. In February, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) withdrew its approval of the use of clopidogrel, a commonly prescribed antiplatelet agent, in patients with acute coronary syndromes and high-risk coronary interventions because of concerns about an increased risk of major bleeding associated with its use. Clopidogrel was first approved in October, 1998, and the FDA approval was based on a series of clinical trials. The most recent trial data, presented at the 2003 Annual Scientific Sessions of the American College of Cardiology, showed an increased risk of major adverse cardiovascular events in patients who did not receive aspirin plus clopidogrel after elective percutaneous coronary intervention. Since that time, the FDA has been conducting an extensive review of the clopidogrel clinical trials and examining data submitted to the Food and Drug Administration by the manufacturer of clopidogrel. The FDA is currently reviewing the totality of the evidence regarding clopidogrel and possible modifications of cl
