However, I'm getting an error: "The type 'A' does not inherit from or implement interface 'System.Collections.IEnumerable'". It seems that it cannot bind to a List when the T class doesn't implement IEnumerable - how should I accomplish binding this data? Here's the REST API binding code: [HttpPost] [Route("data/json/user")] public User Get([FromBody] User user) { if (user == null) throw new BadRequestException("User not provided"); IList data = _customerManager.GetData(user.Id); return new User().FromData(user, data); } And my classes (simplified): public class User { public User() { } public int Id { get; set; } public string UserName { get; set; } } public class A : IEnumerable { } A: You cannot use a List for a bound value of a User object, because a User can have many A items in the list. And for a List you need a IEnumerable, not only a IList. As you are using a custom model binder, you should
